

Occupational Health in Anglo American Metallurgical Coal

OUR VISION

Our vision is to achieve Zero Harm through effective management of occupational health risks in all our managed operations.

We believe our people are our key asset and we do not accept that it is necessary for people to be injured whilst working for us. All employees should be able to return home fit and well at the end of each shift. We believe that one injury is one too many.

OUR PRINCIPLES

Underpinning the Vision are three fundamental Health Principles

All injuries and occupational illnesses are preventable

Learn from our monitoring of exposure and surveillance of disease incidence and use this information to prevent the occurrence of occupational disease

Health standards and rules are consistently applied throughout the Group

OUR POLICY

Seamus French

Seamus French
CEO, Anglo American
Metallurgical Coal

December 2009

Anglo American Metallurgical Coal (AAMC) is one of Australia's leading coal producers with extensive coal mining interests and prospects in Queensland and New South Wales. To realise our vision and principles at all AAMC operations:

We hold AAMC leaders accountable for the occupational health of our people.

We expect AAMC managers and supervisors to provide effective leadership in occupational health management whilst recognising and supporting that all of those who work for us have a responsibility to contribute to a working environment that is without significant risk to health.

We commit to the reduction of exposure at source through good engineering practice and the application of the As Low As Reasonably Possible (ALARP) principle. Compliance with the law will always be the minimum standard.

Management at all AAMC operations is responsible for the full implementation of the AAMC Safety, Health and Environmental Management Systems, the Anglo Occupational Health Way, our Fatal Risk Standards, our Golden Rules and relevant legislation. This requires the allocation of appropriate resources and the provision of training, education, consultation and auditing to ensure compliance.

We commit to open, honest communication with our employees, contractors, suppliers, other business partners and interested third parties to encourage a health and safety culture that reflects the intent of this policy.

We will set measurable objectives and targets and monitor progress against these to ensure continual improvement towards our goal of Zero Harm.