Moranbah North Mine sponsors Moranbah State School's Laptop class

We are a proud resource company adding value to Australia and the world.

As a good corporate citizen we deliver sustainable business returns and growth to our shareholders through providing 'quality tonnes' of coal to our customers.

We are passionate about our relationships, especially with our people. We demonstrate trust, honesty, openness, integrity and humility.

We strongly value teamwork, coaching and developing our people and their careers.

We celebrate our successes.

On Monday 6 April 2009 Anglo Coal Australia's (ACA) Moranbah North Mine employees presented Moranbah State School year six students with protective laptop computer bags for their laptop class, as part of a sponsorship arrangement between the school and the mine.

The school had approached Moranbah in February this year, requesting their support to purchase the bags to enable students to transport their laptops to and from school safely.

Moranbah North General Manager David Sykes said ACA looks for ways to support local community groups by providing sponsorship funding towards projects that foster local community growth, especially in areas of health, education and community services.

"This request was directly in line with our sponsorship criteria of promoting local education, which is why we chose to support this great initiative," Mr Sykes said.

"90 percent of Moranbah North Mine employees' children attend Moranbah State School, so the opportunity was not only beneficial for the community, but also our employee's families."

Moranbah North employee and parent at the school Darren Locke visited the school on Monday to hand the bags out with colleague Scot Alcorn.

"We are pleased to help promote computer education at the school, by getting the students excited about the new bags," Mr Locke said.

"We have also provided the school with additional laptop bags for kids that didn't have them for last year."

Moranbah State School Principle Melissa Jackson expressed her thanks to Anglo Coal Moranbah North for providing the year six class with the bags.

This is the third year the school has offered the popular laptop class.
